Hiya

Building Hiya's trusted voice reputation platform in Spain

Strategic communications, reputation & market entry proposal

hiya

Spain as Hiya’s European reputation testbed

The Opportunity

Spain offers Hiya a unique opportunity to build its first European reputation platform in a market where the need for trusted voice communications is already visible, relevant and urgent. As consumers become increasingly reluctant to answer unknown calls, businesses face growing challenges in reaching customers, and fraud-related concerns continue to shape public conversation, the voice channel is no longer just a communications tool; it is a trust issue.

For Hiya, Spain can become a strategic proof point: a market where proprietary data, local media visibility, telecom relationships and stakeholder engagement can work together to establish the company as a credible authority on trusted calls, spam prevention and phone fraud. By building a strong position in Spain first, Hiya can create a communications model that is locally relevant, commercially useful and scalable across other priority European markets.

Why now?

Businesses, consumers and telecom players are all facing growing trust challenges around phone communications, creating a timely opening for Hiya to lead the conversation in Spain, where there is still no clearly established category leader. This creates a timely opportunity for Hiya to establish itself early as a trusted authority in the category.

Strategic Approach

Spain should not be approached only as a launch market, but as the first step in building Hiya's reputation across Europe. Our strategic approach is designed to help Hiya move from market presence to market relevance: creating a clear local narrative, activating its proprietary data, building trusted media and stakeholder relationships, and positioning its leadership around the future of secure and reliable voice communications.

The objective is to make Hiya part of the conversations that matter in Spain, the second-highest country in Europe in terms of unwanted calls received each month, according to your data. These conversations should range from fraud and spam prevention to customer trust, telecom innovation, and the role of technology in restoring confidence in the voice channel.

The approach

Define the local narrative

We will translate Hiya's global positioning into a Spanish market narrative that feels relevant, timely and differentiated. This means clearly articulating why Hiya matters in Spain, what problem it helps solve, and how its technology, data and experience can contribute to rebuilding trust in phone communications.

Turn data into authority

Hiya's proprietary insights are one of its strongest assets. We will use them to create relevant media angles, thought leadership opportunities and recurring conversations around spam, fraud, unknown calls, consumer behaviour and the business impact of declining trust in voice communications.

Build the right visibility

The goal is not visibility for visibility's sake. We will focus on targeted exposure in the media, forums and industry conversations that can help Hiya build credibility with the audiences that matter: telecom players, business decision-makers, technology media, consumer press and relevant ecosystem stakeholders.

Position Hiya's leadership

We will support Hiya's executives and spokespeople, primarily Mariano González-Cayuela, in establishing themselves as credible expert voices in the Spanish market. This includes messaging development, interview preparation, shaping opinion angles, identifying speaking and networking opportunities, and providing guidance on how to communicate complex issues with clarity and authority. We will advise on where and when to engage in relevant conversations.

Create a scalable model for Europe

Spain will serve as Hiya's first local reputation hub, allowing the company to test messaging, sequences of reputation-building, refine content formats, activate data-led narratives, and develop a communications playbook that can later be adapted to other European markets such as France and Germany.

Our Understanding of Hiya's Challenge

Turning market entry into market relevance

Hiya is entering Spain at a moment where trusted voice communications are becoming increasingly important for businesses, telecom operators and consumers alike. But relevance is not automatic. It must be built through a clear local narrative, credible proof points, trusted relationships and sustained visibility.

The challenge is turning Hiya from "a U.S. company entering the market" into a credible local authority within the conversations already shaping the Spanish telecom and business landscape.

This requires a communications approach capable of:

- Translating global expertise into local relevance
- Building trust and recognition among key stakeholders
- Activating strategic relationships already in place,
- Creating a scalable positioning model for future European expansion.

ADDENDUM FOR: Turning market entry into market relevance*

Regulatory Narrative

Spain is not simply a new market for Hiya. It is one of the first European markets where regulation, consumer behavior and business need are converging around the same issue: the loss of trust in the voice channel.

The introduction of the 400 prefix and Ley 10/2025 is reshaping how companies can contact consumers, at a time when a large part of the population already avoids answering unknown calls due to spam and fraud concerns. The result is a growing challenge for legitimate businesses that still depend on phone communications to operate.

This creates a clear opportunity for Hiya: not only to help identify calls, but to help rebuild trust in who is calling and why the call deserves to be answered.

Recommended narrative frame

From nuisance calls to trusted voice infrastructure

The conversation in Spain should move beyond “how do we reduce unwanted calls?” towards a broader and more strategic question: how do we make the voice channel trustworthy again?

For Hiya, this is the opportunity to move from being perceived as an anti-spam solution to being positioned as part of the trust infrastructure that enables consumers to answer calls with more confidence and legitimate businesses to protect one of their most important customer contact channels.

Yes, we will need to also help educate the market as we shift the conversation.

ADDENDUM FOR: Turning market entry into market relevance*

Regulation is changing the rules of engagement

Spain's new regulatory environment is creating clearer expectations for commercial calls and putting pressure on businesses, operators and technology partners to make the channel more transparent and accountable.

A commercial call can be identified and still not be trusted. The real opportunity is to add reputation, context and intelligence so consumers can understand not only what type of call it is, but whether it is safe and legitimate.

Identification is only the first step

Trust is now a business-critical issue

When consumers stop answering unknown calls, legitimate companies lose access to a critical customer contact channel. This affects customer service, sales, deliveries, appointments, banking, insurance, healthcare, utilities and verification processes.

Spain offers a timely environment to show how regulation, technology, operators and business adoption can work together to rebuild confidence in voice communications, creating learnings that could later scale to other European markets.

Spain can become Europe's testbed

Hiya provides the data layer

Hiya can bring proprietary insights into spam, fraud, impersonation, caller reputation and consumer behaviour. This allows the company to move beyond opinion and become a credible source of intelligence on what is really happening in the voice channel.

Voice Trust Brief 2026

Recommended Anchor Asset

To lead this conversation, we recommend creating a short, data-led and media-friendly asset: Spain Voice Trust Brief 2026.

This would not be a product brochure or a traditional press release. It would be a concise market brief designed to give journalists, operators, business stakeholders and potential partners a clear view of why the issue matters now and what needs to happen next. The brief would act as the central content asset and feed a broader activation plan:

- An executive op-ed: "Why Spain is becoming Europe's testbed for trusted voice."
- A media briefing kit with regulatory timeline, key stats, Q&A and Hiya POV.
- A short journalist briefing deck for priority media conversations.
- Possible LinkedIn thought leadership series for Hiya executives.

Reputation & Communications Workstreams

To build Hiya's authority in Spain, Quimera will activate five connected workstreams. Together, they are designed to turn Hiya's global expertise into a locally relevant company: clear narrative, proprietary insight, targeted visibility, executive authority and readiness for sensitive conversations.

1. Local Positioning Strategy

Defining why Hiya matters in Spain

The first step is to translate Hiya's global positioning into a clear Spanish market narrative. This narrative should explain not only what Hiya does, but why its role is relevant now: helping restore trust in the voice channel at a time when spam, fraud and unknown calls are affecting consumers and businesses alike.

This workstream will create the foundation for all external communications, ensuring that Hiya speaks with clarity, consistency and local relevance across media, stakeholders, events and executive visibility opportunities.

What this includes:

- Spanish market narrative
- Key messages by audience
- Corporate boilerplate and positioning language
- Localized Q&A
- Adaptation of global messaging and content
- Message house for Spain and future European use

Outcome: A clear, locally relevant communications platform that positions Hiya as a trusted authority in voice communications.

2. Data-Led Thought Leadership

Turning proprietary insights into authority

Hiya's proprietary data is one of its strongest communications assets. Our role is to turn that data into relevant stories, media angles and thought leadership opportunities for the Spanish market.

The objective is not just to support announcements, but to build a solid narrative around spam, fraud, unknown calls, consumer behavior and trust in the voice channel, helping position Hiya as a consistent expert source within the conversation.

MasOrange Activation Approach

MasOrange is one of Hiya's most important underused opportunities in Spain, but it should be activated carefully. The goal is to turn the relationship into credibility without over-commercialising it, overpromising its role or putting pressure on the partner before there is clear alignment.

We recommend treating MasOrange as a credibility accelerator, not as the story itself. The broader story should remain the future of trusted voice communications in Spain; MasOrange can help validate that story by showing that operator collaboration is essential to rebuilding trust in the voice channel.

MasOrange should help demonstrate that trusted voice is not only a technology issue, but an ecosystem challenge involving operators, businesses, consumers and trusted data partners. Its role should be to strengthen Hiya's credibility in the market, while keeping Hiya clearly positioned as the expert voice on caller reputation, fraud prevention and trusted voice intelligence.

What this includes:

- Identification of relevant data stories for Spain
- Localization of global reports and insights
- Development of media angles based on proprietary data
- Editorial themes and thought leadership planning
- Op-ed and byline concepts
- Support for reports, snapshots or market briefs

Outcome: A clear, locally relevant communications platform that positions Hiya as a trusted authority in voice communications.

3. Media & Stakeholder Engagement

Building the right visibility and relationships

Hiya does not need mass visibility. It needs visibility in the places and conversations that matter for its reputation and business objectives in Spain.

Quimera will help build those relationships across trade media, business press, telecom stakeholders, ecosystem partners and relevant industry conversations.

What this includes:

- Media landscape and priority journalist mapping
- Stakeholder and ecosystem mapping
- Targeted media outreach
- Press briefings and relationship building
- Announcement and launch support
- Event, forum and speaking opportunity mapping
- Coordination with partners or third-party voices where relevant

Outcome:

A focused relationship-building strategy that helps Hiya enter the right conversations and build credibility with the right audiences.

4. Executive Visibility & Public Presence

Positioning Hiya's leaders as expert voices

To build trust in a new market, Hiya's leadership should be visible not only as company representatives, but as expert voices on the future of trusted communications.

Quimera will support executive positioning by defining the themes, messages and formats through which Hiya's spokespeople can communicate with authority in Spain: interviews, panels, podcasts, opinion pieces, briefings and industry events.

ADDENDUM FOR: 3. Media & Stakeholder Engagement*

Examples for the media landscape and priority journalist mapping

Who/Which	Why	How
Esther Paniagua El Español & other media	Works in many media outlets, interested in tech & cyber-security. Not afraid of hard data and regulatory frameworks	Exclusive Interview + Briefing i.e. what is missing from eIDAS 2.0. and Hiya as the practical use case for verified caller identity in Europe.
Esther Macías Computerworld / CSO / CIO España (Foundry Group)	Receptive to high-quality technical briefings, will understand the broad picture. Known by C-levels in tech.	CEO Interview + Data Brief i.e. AI vishing now surpasses corporate phishing in average cost per attack
El País — Technology	Tier-1 generalist. It's tech vertical.	Embargoed Data Exclusive i.e. full report under embargo
Xataka	Boost in helping the consumers (culture) hear Hiya's name. Aware it is B2C, but absolute Tier-1.	Product Demo + Article Pitch i.e. consumer's POV: how does my android identify spam calls
El Confidencial — Teknautas	More modern take on stories, good journalism behind. Tier-1.	Background Brief + Interview Spain and the caller authentication gap: U.S. data vs Spain's

+3 B2B publications worth pursuing:

Who/Which	Why	How
Revista SIC	Spain's reference cybersecurity publication for 30+ years. Read by every CISO in the country. Organises IdentiSIC and Securmática , the two most relevant events for our positioning.	Technical Article + IdentiSIC Event i.e. voice fraud overlooked: how caller identity reduces corporate exposure and why it is the missing layer in the NIS2 compliance stack
Contact Center Hub	Omnichannel platform for CX and contact center directors. 9,000+ professionals.	Thought Leadership Article i.e. trusted caller identity lets legitimate outbound calls get answered again. Possible interest in the revenue case for voice authentication in the contact center
Relación Cliente Magazine	Established trade magazine. Older and more formal than Contact Center Hub, with loyal readership among operational CX directors. Complements CCHub with a different format and generation of reader.	Article i.e. why the answer rate problem in outbound voice is a trust problem + what happening to change that

What this includes:

- Executive positioning platform
- Spokesperson messaging
- Interview preparation
- Talking points and briefing materials
- Panel and speaking preparation
- Thought leadership angles
- Ghostwriting support for opinion pieces or executive content

Outcome: Prepared, credible and visible Hiya spokespeople who can represent the company's expertise with clarity and authority in the Spanish market.

5. Reputation Readiness & Sensitive Issues Advisory

Preparing for high-sensitivity conversations

Hiya operates in a space connected to trust, fraud, privacy, telecoms, consumer protection and emerging technology. These topics create strong communications opportunities, but they can also raise sensitive questions.

Quimera will help Hiya anticipate potential reputational risks, prepare clear responses and ensure the company is ready to communicate confidently in high-visibility or sensitive situations.

What this includes:

- Reputational risk mapping
- Sensitive issues Q&A
- Reactive messaging
- Scenario planning
- Advisory on media-sensitive topics
- Support during high-pressure communications moments
- Coordination guidance for legal, policy or corporate teams where needed

Outcome: A stronger reputational position and greater readiness to respond to sensitive topics with consistency, confidence and control.

From foundation to market momentum

90-Day Activation Roadmap

The first 90 days will be designed to build the foundations of Hiya’s reputation in Spain, activate the right visibility opportunities and create a communications model that can be scaled across future European markets. Rather than approaching the first quarter as a sequence of isolated PR actions, Quimera will structure the work around three phases: foundation, activation and momentum.

Phase	Focus	Core Actions	Outcome
Month 1	Foundation	Discovery workshop, narrative, key messages, media and stakeholder mapping	Spain communications platform
Month 2	Activation	Media outreach, data-led stories, spokesperson prep, press materials, opportunity mapping	First market visibility
Month 3	Momentum	Relationship building, thought leadership, executive visibility, message refinement	Scalable reputation model

What Success Looks Like After 90 Days

By the end of the first quarter, Hiya should have:

- A clear Spanish market narrative. A locally relevant story that explains why Hiya matters now.
- A mapped media and stakeholder ecosystem. A prioritized view of the journalists, outlets, forums and industry conversations that matter.
- Initial visibility and relationship-building. Targeted outreach and first conversations with relevant media and ecosystem players.
- Data-led thought leadership angles. Spanish market storylines built from Hiya’s proprietary insights.
- Prepared executive spokespeople. Clear messages, talking points and visibility themes for Hiya’s leadership.
- A stronger reputation platform. Foundations that support sustained communications in Spain and future European scalability.

ADDENDUM FOR: From foundation to market momentum*

How month 1 differs from month 6

While month 1 is about building the foundation: agreeing the narrative, messages, regulatory point of view, priority audiences, media map and proof points.

Month 6, although remaining flexible for the business’ needs, should be about consolidating authority: stronger journalist relationships, clearer stakeholder credibility, more confident executive visibility and a tested Spanish communications model that can be adapted to other European markets.

Month	Focus	Core angle	Outcome
Month 1	Foundation	Discovery, regulatory narrative (400 rule + Law 10/2025), key messages, media map, MasOrange & Telefónica ecosystem mapping	Clear Spain narrative and activation plan
Month 2	Asset development	Spain Voice Trust Brief, journalist briefing materials, spokesperson preparation	Ready-to-activate content platform
Month 3	Initial market activation	Selective media briefings, op-ed, data-led outreach, first executive visibility	First wave of credibility and coverage
Month 4	Sector deepening	Telecom, fraud, enterprise CX and customer trust angles; expansion into niche trade media relationships	Broader relevance beyond regulation
Month 5	Stakeholder activation	Partner route, events, roundtable or closed-door briefing	Stronger ecosystem presence
Month 6	Scale and optimise	Results review, message refinement, documentation of learnings for France and Germany rollout	Spain playbook for broader European use

A note on this version: Months 1–3 reflect the original 90-day plan, updated to explicitly incorporate the priorities you raised: regulatory narrative, MasOrange partnership activation and the anchor asset ahead of media outreach. Months 4–6 are a direct response to the question about the six-month horizon.

A senior local partner to build Hiya's reputation in Spain

Collaboration Model & Investment

Quimera will act as Hiya's strategic communications partner in Spain, combining senior advisory, local market intelligence, media and stakeholder access, and reputation-building experience. The collaboration is designed to give Hiya more than executional PR support. It provides a senior local team capable of helping the company enter the Spanish market with clarity, credibility and the right level of strategic visibility.

The right local partner for Hiya's European expansion

Why Quimera

Hiya needs a partner that can understand both the strategic ambition and the local market reality. Quimera combines senior communications counsel with a strong understanding of the Spanish media, business and reputation ecosystem. We bring four key strengths to the collaboration:

Senior advisory

Direct access to senior consultants who can advise on positioning, messaging, media strategy, executive visibility and sensitive reputational matters.

A strong understanding of the Spanish media landscape, technology and business conversations, relevant industry forums, and the stakeholders that can help shape Hiya's reputation locally.

Local ecosystem knowledge

Strategic communications expertise

Experience translating complex business, technology and corporate narratives into clear stories that resonate with media, executives, industry audiences and broader public conversations.

A reputation-first approach that goes beyond coverage generation, helping companies build credibility, manage sensitive topics and establish long-term authority in the market.

Reputation experience

Quimera will help Hiya not only communicate in Spain, but build a credible and useful position in the Spanish conversation around trusted voice communications.

A senior local partner to build Hiya’s reputation in Spain

Relevant Track Record

Instead of a list of just logos, we map our experience to what Hiya actually needs. Each entry reflects a real challenge, a concrete action, and a transferable outcome — while respecting our clients' communications journeys.

Relevant need for Hiya	Client reference & Quimera experience
Regulation as a narrative asset  Back Market	Back Market Communications in a context of high regulatory exposure (right to repair, USB-C mandate, EU sustainability legislation). Building and sustaining a public narrative around regulation — positioning the brand as an authority in the conversation rather than a subject of it.
Telecom ecosystem & MNO relationships  Telefónica	Telefónica (in-house) Communications and content from inside a major Spanish telco: brand positioning, narrative consistency, and multi-channel communications at scale. Direct knowledge of how Spanish MNOs structure their communications, what they respond to, and how partnerships are activated internally.
Contact centre & outbound voice sector  kovecta	Konecta (in-house) Creation and management of digital marketing content in a global contact centre environment. Supporting corporate narrative and service communications at scale — direct experience in the sector where Hiya's business impact is most immediate.
B2B tech expert positioning & market entry  CRITICAL SOFTWARE	Critical Software Leading communications for a complex international technology account in critical infrastructure. International positioning, media visibility and reputation construction in high-demand environments. Experience managing international teams and timelines — directly transferable to a US-headquartered client.

Niche B2B authority & product storytelling

Deiser

B2B technology account management focused on expert positioning, product and service communications, and building authority within a specialist niche. The kind of focused, credibility-first approach Hiya needs in the Spanish telecom and enterprise technology space.

Data-led thought leadership in complex markets

Chiliz (in-house)

Communications in a high-noise reputational environment (crypto/sports tech) with international reach across APAC, EMEA, LATAM and the US. Market education, narrative management in an industry where trust is fragile, and communications coordination across multiple markets simultaneously.

International expansion & growth communications

Ironhack

Growth-oriented communications with a focus on brand positioning, visibility campaigns, and international expansion support. Experience adapting a US-born brand narrative for Spanish and European audiences — directly relevant to Hiya's localization challenge.

Institutional & bilateral ecosystem navigation

Câmara de Comercio Portuguesa en España

Institutional communications, reputation management and visibility within a bilateral business ecosystem. Experience building credibility with institutional and industry stakeholders — the kind of relationship network that can open doors in MNO and regulatory environments.

Each of these accounts taught us something directly applicable to Hiya's challenge in Spain: how to enter a market without sounding foreign, how to build authority in emerging categories, and how to make regulation work in the brand's favor rather than against it. That is exactly the kind of positioning we want to build for Hiya.

How we will work together

Collaboration Model

The collaboration will be structured as a quarterly strategic retainer, giving Hiya ongoing access to Quimera’s senior communications team and allowing both teams to prioritize the initiatives with the greatest reputational and business value. The model combines strategic advisory, planned communications activity and flexibility to support relevant opportunities or time-sensitive needs.

Strategic advisory & coordination	Ongoing senior counsel, strategic planning, regular check-ins, prioritization of communications opportunities and coordination with Hiya’s global communications team.
Narrative & messaging support	Development and refinement of the Spanish market narrative, key messages, spokesperson materials, Q&A and adaptation of global content.
Media relations & stakeholder engagement	Targeted media outreach, journalist relationship-building, press briefings, announcement support and relevant stakeholder or ecosystem opportunity mapping.
Data-led thought leadership	Identification of local angles from Hiya’s proprietary data, development of media hooks, editorial ideas, opinion angles and thought leadership opportunities.
Executive positioning	Support for interviews, panels, speaking opportunities, podcasts, executive messaging, talking points and public presence preparation.
Reputation readiness	Reputation readiness. Strategic guidance on sensitive topics, reputational risks, reactive messaging and preparation for high-visibility conversations.

Quarterly strategic retainer

Investment - Updated

Retainer fee:

$25,300 per quarter + VAT

This includes ongoing strategic communications advisory, media relations, executive positioning, reputation support and up to three priority communications initiatives or announcements per month.

Additional support available when needed

Certain high-intensity or specialist needs may require additional scope beyond the core retainer. These can be activated separately depending on Hiya’s priorities.

Optional module	Indicative fee
Intensive media training	$4,000 – $15,000
Crisis simulation workshop	$7,000 – $17,000
Executive positioning sprint	$10,500 – $20,000
Company-wide strategic narrative development	From $7,500
Public speaking preparation	From $3,000
Lon-form executive ghostwriting	From $4,500 / month
Intensive crisis advisory	Custom retainer
On-site / international presence / media tours	Custom + expenses

To align with Hiya’s preferred operating model, the original quarterly retainer (see above) can be converted into monthly invoicing while preserving the same strategic scope and level of senior support.

Updated structure: $8,433 per month + VAT, invoiced monthly

The core retainer would remain focused on market-building and would include strategic advisory and coordination, Spanish market narrative and messaging, media relations and stakeholder engagement, data-led thought leadership, executive visibility, monthly planning and reporting, and support for agreed monthly priority initiatives.

Ready to build Hiya's reputation in Spain

Spain can become Hiya's first European proof point: a market where the company builds authority, activates its data, develops trusted relationships and creates a communications model that can scale across Europe. Quimera is ready to support Hiya as a senior local partner, helping the company move from market entry to market authority.
